DaemerCollege StudentsFaculty,andStaff

DearColleagues,

As we beginthe newacademicyear, I want to take this opportunity to remindal members of the Daemen community of our shared values. Our mission is "to prepare students or life and leadership an increasingly diverse and complex world by integrating the intellectual qualities acquired through the liberal arts with the preparatiom ecessar for professional achievement."

At its core, highereducation exists as a space for robust, respect full ebate in which various and often conflicting ideas are explored and evaluated As members of an education a bommunity, both in and out of the class room, we are committed to advancing universal human dignity and a just, equitable, and democratic society.

DaemerCollegeupholdsandrespectshe right to free speechas wellasour responsibilityaseducators and citizens ochallengeny and allmanifestations for prejudice as outlined very clearly in our non-discrimination policy. As an institution of higher education, we value differing opinions and points of view, while having no tolerance for hatred, bigotry, or violence. These values guideour actions in the roles we play as members of an academic community.

As we continue to enhance our reputation as a college of national distinction, it is important that we hold our selves and each other to these shared values and helpour students eet he bigger picture.

I also want to remind you that College has endorsed the "One Daemen" poladuced by the Council for Diversity and Inclusion. I encourage community members to take a few minutes to review the plan online: https://www.daemen.edu/sites/default/files/plan.pdf

Bestwishesfor the start of the academigear.

Cordially,

GaryA. Olson
